FOREST RESERVES

Board of Agriculture Approves Oahu Lines.

The Board of Agriculture and Forestry met yesterday afternoon, the members present being C. S. Holloway, A. W. Carter, W. M. Giffard, J. F. Brown and L. A. Thurston, and also Forester Hosmer and Entomologists Craw and Kotinsky.

The committee on forestry reported on the recommendation of the forester for forest reserves at Keaau, Ohikilolo, Makua and Kahanahake, in the Waianae district, Island of Oahu. These lands comprise two valleys lying west of Waianae next to Kaena Point.

The committee after personal investigation and consultation with Land Commissioner Pratt recommended the adoption of the lines recommended by Forester Hosmer.

Mr. Hosmer presented the manuscript of a proposed circular offering the services of the forestry division to those desiring to propagate trees. The circular was referred to the forestry committee with power to act.

Mr. Hosmer reported that he had secured several hundred iron-wood ties which had been given to the Oahu Railroad to install in various localities under varying conditions to experiment with and see what kind of ties they would make. Mr. Hosmer was of the opinion that they would make very desirable ties. If this was found correct the Territory would furnish a good supply of home-grown ties and keep that much money from going away.

The forester also reported the receipt of a large number of vegetable seeds from Delegate Kuhio, which were available for distribution on application. A large number were being sent out to school teachers for distribution.

The same official reported that he had visited and was about to make recommendations for a forest reserve at Luualalei on the Waianae mountains, east of Waianae.

C. C. Conradt of Kalaheo, Molokai, was appointed fire-warden for east Molokai.

The Board offered the position of forester for the district of North Kohala to T. S. Kay, manager of the Halawa plantation.

Reports of Dr. Norgaard, territorial veterinarian, concerning his recent trips to Hawaii and Maui, were read. The doctor returned to Hawaii on Tuesday and will be absent about three weeks, inspecting the state of stock in the Kau and Waimea districts.

LIEUT. LEONARD ON THE YOUNG COURT-MARTIAL

Lieutenant Commander L. C. Leonard, the executive officer of the Lawton, has been in Honolulu before and is glad to get back here. He was Lieutenant Blue's predecessor as the executive officer of the Bennington, which blew up in San Diego harbor. Consequently he was called as a witness in the court-martial of Commander Lucien Young.

He was in Honolulu on the Lawton just after the accident and received the first news of it here. As he knew every officer and most all of the men, it was a great shock to him. He said yesterday that when he heard the first news he did not dare ask questions for fear that many of his friends had been killed. He regards it as a great piece of good fortune that his transfer came before the terrible accident, as he feels sure that, as executive officer, he would have been among those who were right in the range of danger.

Speaking of the Young court-martial, Mr. Leonard confirms the statement of Judge Gear, Commander Young's counsel, that no one knows what the findings of the court-martial are save the officers of the court and the receiving authority. The story that Young had been reprimanded is therefore not correct, as there is nothing to base it on. There was a story current in San Francisco at the time the Lawton left that neither of the findings would be given out until both of the cases had been finally passed upon by the Secretary of the Navy. The officers on the Lawton seemed to think this quite a likely state of affairs.

Those aboard the Lawton spoke in the highest terms of the defense which Judge Gear put up in the Young trial. One of the officers who followed the case very closely and heard the closing address of both the Judge Advocate and the counsel for Commander Young, states that when Judge Gear finished, it seemed almost impossible that Young could be convicted on the evidence. The regulations, it is stated, point very plainly to the fact that the officer in charge of the engine rooms, Ensign Wade, in this case, is as directly responsible for that department of the ship as is the surgeon for the health of the ship and the officer in command of the ship is no more supposed to personally attend to the one than to the other.

It would appear, though the officers were careful not to say so in terms, that if the responsibility for the accident is to be taken higher than the ensign in charge of the engine rooms, it would be just as logical, if the commander of the ship were to be held responsible, to hold also Admiral Goodrich, the commander-in-chief of the Pacific squadron, and the Secretary of the Navy, for the testimony showed that each of five quarterly reports sent to the Navy Department by the commander of the vessel previous to the accident had reported the boilers to be "poor" and each had pointed out in detail wherein the defects lay. These reports were made by the ensign in charge of the engine rooms, sent to the executive officer, endorsed, sent to the commander of the Bennington, endorsed by him and forwarded to Admiral Goodrich, who in turn endorsed the papers and sent them to the Navy Department.

That seems to be the last that was heard of them, so it might develop that the buck, if it does not belong to Ensign Wade, has been successively passed up from one grade to the next until it had reached the Secretary of the Navy himself, or at least the official directly in charge of such matters in the department. But, as one of the officers remarked, "the Secretary of the Navy prefers the charges and of course the Navy Department is not trying itself."

The President's action in the matter is claimed to have been perfunctory, in that no court-martial can be held in American waters unless it is ordered with his personal sanction. On the foreign stations, however, admirals may convene courts martial, but their findings must go to Washington in the regular manner for review.

The Lawtons officers expected to hear of the result of the court-martial on arrival here. There was a story current in San Francisco last week that the detention of all the members of the court on the mainland meant that the court would sit again, but there was no basis to the statement. It is thought that the order was merely a precautionary measure, as the Secretary has the right to request more exemplary punishment if the evidence, in the opinion of the Secretary of the Navy, warrants it. The court can then adhere to its findings or amend them. The Secretary has the right of approval or disapproval, but it would appear that he can not himself increase a sentence passed by a court-martial. Instances have been known where courts refused to increase sentence and the department disapproved the whole thing and restored the officer to duty, which is considered a slam at the court.

LOVE-PATTERSON

Surrounded by beautiful flowers and in the midst of intimate friends, Miss Stella Love of Honolulu and Mr. S. J. Patterson of Seattle, Washington, were united in marriage last evening at 8:30 at the beautiful home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Fanny Love, Kewalo st. Rev. Dr. William M. Kincaid, pastor of Central Union church, officiated. Following the ceremony a brilliant reception was attended by hundreds of the young couple's friends.

It was a perfectly appointed wedding. The beautiful tropical home which is set in the midst of park-like premises was attractively decorated with the choicest of flowers and greenery, while the grounds resembled a fairyland with rows of Japanese and Chinese lanterns glowing in festoons from tree to tree. In fact, with the parti-colored electric gleaming on the branches, the trees appeared as if decorated for a Christmas celebration. Lanterns hung from the eaves of the house, giving a very pretty effect.

The large circular lanai, besides its garnishment of flowers and potted plants, was made still more charming with the subdued glow of Oriental lanterns.

The reception hall in which the marriage ceremony was performed was an artistically decorated conservatory. One corner was hung with feathery hug-me-tight branches, over which were sprayed jasmine blossoms. Potted plants and bowls of roses here and there formed a dainty picture. In the hallway were potted ferns, the staircase being hung with foliage of the pepper-tree. A huge knot of white satin adorned the newelpost.

At 8:30 the music of the Lohengrin Wedding March was heard, played by Miss Ada Rhodes. At that moment the ushers, Messrs. Harold Dillingham, C. Arthur Mackintosh, George Fuller and Robert McCarriston, came down the stairway and on reaching the hallway faced in, holding two satin ribbons to form a lane from the stair. Then came four little misses in white, two by two, serious of mien and stately of tread. Passing through the lane of ribbons they continued it until it almost reached the wedding bower. Mrs. Clarence H. Cooke, sister of the bride, and matron of honor, descended the stair alone. She was gowned in pink chiffon taffeta, trimmed with real lace, and carried a beautiful cluster of pink roses. Then as the guests eagerly watched the stairway, the bride came, leaning on the arm of her brother, Mr. James Love. Her entry into the hallway was an auspicious moment, and she was declared a beautiful bride in her gown of pearly white chiffon taffeta, trimmed with choice real lace, and bearing a large bridal bouquet of bride's roses. The veil was caught with a diamond sunburst, the gift of the groom. The party was met at the bower by the minister and the groom who was supported by his best man, Mr. George Cooke.

The bride was given away in marriage by Mr. James Love, and while the minister pronounced the couple husband and wife, Mendelssohn's Spring Song fell softly upon the ear. The last sacred words said, the bride's veil was thrown back and she received the salutes of her intimates.

In the reception following, hundreds of friends trooped past the receiving line which was composed of the bride and groom, of course, Mrs. Fanny Love, Mrs. C. H. Cooke, Mr. James Love, Mr. George Cooke and Mrs. C. H. Smith, the latter attractively gowned in white.

Refreshments were served in a brilliantly illuminated tent on the lawn, hung with American and Hawaiian flags and festooned with malle, the tables bearing vases of carnations, roses and asters. The Ellis Quintet Club played throughout the evening.

The presents received by the couple were beautiful and ornamental as well as practical. The couple will probably depart for the mainland on the S. S. Siberia, January 5, and will journey direct to Seattle where they will make their future home. The groom is a prominent young business man of that bustling city.

MAY CHANGE BASE OF NEGOTIATIONS

Geo. H. Fairchild, manager of the Makee Sugar Co., called on Land Commissioner Pratt late yesterday afternoon. It is probable, though not yet decided, that Messrs. Pratt, Fairchild and James B. Castle will proceed to Los Angeles, Cal., shortly, with a view to effecting a satisfactory agreement with the Molokans there, whereby they will come here to settle on the Kapaa lands.

Chang Hing Kee, who had saved $265 against a rainy day, left the door of his safe open on Christmas Day and on returning found that someone had abstracted all the gold, leaving only some silver. The police have been notified of the loss.
